Executive Summary

Zackary Mark is a student advocate at Sun Prairie West High School. He runs two independent projects: SPASD Student Voice (since January 2026), which brings student input to Sun Prairie Area School District leaders, and Sun Prairie ALPR (since July 2026), a plain-language community report on the police department's license plate reader cameras.

What changed because students spoke up

- District newsletters will go to every student, confirmed in writing on October 21.
- Students sat on principal interviews and met the superintendent finalists, and a Student Senate restarted at Sun Prairie West.
- Students helped write the weighted grades plan; it went to the Board on November 9, with a final vote expected late November.
- Superintendent Dr. Reed backed a District-Wide Student Council ("I love this idea"); Patrick Marsh signed on and other schools are responding.
- The police chief put plate reader commitments in writing: a 14-day retention trial, no livestreaming, monthly audits and a public data-sharing agreement after signing.

Also answered in writing: the district confirmed on October 1 that LGBTQIA+ protections are unchanged.

What's still open: a formal path and sponsor for the student council, the final weighted grades vote, the city's Nov 17 budget vote on the Axon cameras, a public records request, and questions to the Board about the superintendent's license.

How this record works: every email appears as a numbered card (E-001 onward) with sender, recipients and date. Officials' statements are quoted, not paraphrased, and labeled as statements rather than policy. Student names other than Zackary's are removed. Sources and an index are at the back.
